Authorization for this examiner's amendment was given in a telephone interview with Rob McDowell on 3/27/08.

The application has been amended as follows:

15. (Currently amended) An article as claimed in claim 15 ~~44~~, wherein the instructions, when executed, further result in an authenticated key exchange by receiving, by the user station, a pairwise master key response element from the AP, wherein the pairwise master key response element is transmitted by the AP as a reassociation response and is based on the user station nonce and an additional message integrity code, the additional message integrity code being computed using the message integrity code algorithm with a key encryption key, the probe response, and the pairwise master key request information element, and wherein the key encryption key is computed using the pseudo random function algorithm with the pairwise master key, the media access control address of the AP, and the media access control address of the user station.

19. (Currently amended) An apparatus as claimed in claim 17 ~~48~~, said baseband processor to receive a pairwise master key response element from the AP, wherein the pairwise master key response element is transmitted by the AP as a reassociation response and is based on the user station nonce and an additional message integrity code, the additional message integrity code being computed using the message integrity code algorithm with a key encryption key, the probe response, and the pairwise master key request information element, and wherein the key encryption key is computed using the pseudo random function algorithm with the pairwise master key, the media access control address of the AP, and the media access control address of the user station.

End of Amendments.
